

Notes for contributors

Articles are welcome from all those who work with groups in any discipline: whether practitioners, trainers, researchers, users, or consultants. Accounts of innovations, research findings on existing practice, policy issues affecting groupwork, and discussions of conceptual developments are all relevant. Groupwork with clients, users, professional teams, or community groups fall within our range.

Length: Full length articles, normally of around 4500 words, should show the context of practice and relate this to existing knowledge in groupwork theory and practice. We also accept brief contributions that focus on current issues or that offer a critique/commentary on a particular area of groupwork theory and practice. These can be shorter in length and do not need to adhere to the referencing guidelines required for articles.

Presentation: Documents should be in Word format and forwarded as an email attachment to the Editors. The name(s) of the author(s) should not appear in the text or in running heads. A title page should be included, with name of the author(s), a correspondence and an email address. A summary of no more than 200 words should also be provided, together with six key words.

We use Harvard referencing. References within the text should be cited by giving the author's name and year of publication, e.g. (Smith, 2004). Specific page numbers should be cited after a direct quotation (Smith, 2004, p 46). Those works cited in the text (and no others) should be listed at the end of the text in alphabetical order by author's name, using the journal's standard conventions. Please contact the Editors if you require further guidance.

Further details on manuscript submission may be obtained from the Editors or publishers. Visit www.whitingbirch.net/ip006.shtml for more details on house style.

Peer review: All articles are subject to anonymous scrutiny by two peer reviewers. Final responsibility for publication lies with the Editors.

Articles and enquiries should be emailed to the Editor(s): T.B.Kelly@dundee.ac.uk and jfleming@dmu.ac.uk

Editorial postal address: Professor Timothy B Kelly, School of Education, Social Work and Community Education, University of Dundee, Perth Road, Dundee DD1 4HN.

NEW SERIES

Critical Studies in Occupational Therapy and Occupational Science

This new series provides an opportunity for scholars to publish serious analytical studies and monographs in the field of occupational therapy and occupational science - books which offer critical discussion of the profession, its practice, its underpinning knowledge and its philosophy bases.

We are committed above all else to meeting the needs of those seeking to publish well researched, innovative, and compelling material that is not well accommodated by the rigid constraints of tightly categorised marketing genres. We believe that this series will be particularly welcomed by a diverse and international range of research active occupational therapists and occupational scientists, people who are often working in changing healthcare and social environments. The established Editorial Board reflects the global reach intended.

We welcome proposals from occupational therapists and occupational scientists for books which:

- explore and analyse the complexities of intervention, culture and diversity in human occupation across a wide range of topics
- are underpinned by rigorous methodology

Research monographs, edited collections and single or multiple authored research based texts, among others, will be considered for publication via a robust, efficient but supportive peer review process. This series will consist of challenging and higher level texts aimed at continuing professional development, post-graduate or advanced studies rather than basic undergraduate texts. We will also consider outstanding doctoral theses that can be converted into interesting monographs with a wide appeal for an informed but broad occupational therapy and occupational science readership.

The first title in the series, Meaningful Living through Occupation, by Moses N. Ikiugu and Nick Pollard, will be published in the Autumn of 2013. We are now seeking submissions for our 2014 programme.

We encourage potential authors to discuss their ideas with Nick Pollard, Editor in Chief (N.Pollard@shu.ac.uk). Further notes on submission requirements can be found on the series home page: www.whitingbirch.net.
